Can Germany Wollop Uncle Sam?

and spied upon and are treated as if they were a poison being introduced into Germany, and they come back to the United States with a violent hatred of the German government.

"It is a miracle that at this crisis of our history there is a man by the name of Bowen, a man who has come to the front in spite of politicians and who is capable and competent to handle this important matter to the credit of his country."

During the course of his lecture
Mr Bigelow said:—

"We want the markets of the world, and we want the earth, because we believe that we have more intelligence and enterprise than any one else. We have exterminated the Indians, and by so doing have become a monument to the survival of the fittest, which idea, since the Spanish-American war, we have forced on the nations of Europe. We want the markets of the earth, because all the wars in our history were struggles for the markets. We are approaching a new struggle for more markets. I don't say that we need them, but the movement is growing, and there is bound to be a physical clash.

"German officials today cannot understand how it can be possible to get German-Americans to fight against Germany. They believe that the German's here are being bulldozed, and societies have been formed to educate Germans in all parts of the world as to their duty to the German government. The Germans in Russia represent large colonies, but they have to serve in the Russia army, yet you never hear Germany complain about that to her neighbor. There is, however, a feeling against England and the United States and a belief that something must be done."—New York Herald.

Trick Candies.

"The trick cigar has its counterpart in confectionery," said a candy manufacturer the other day. "The callow youth who delights in giving explosive cigars to his men friends demands something similar for the candy consuming sex, and we have to meet the demand.

"The possibilities of a cream chocolate or a piece of nougat are limited, but we have a few contrivances. We make of a very hard candy an imitation of a tooth with a gold crown and hide it in a cream chocolate. You can imagine the rest—a party of women munching candy, one of them discovered something hard and finding a gold crowned tooth loose in her mouth!

"Similarly we imitate a bone collar button in a hard white candy, hide a candy shoe button in a piece of nougat, put a bit of cork in a caramel or fill a candied cherry with red pepper. So long as the sanity experts don't weed out these alleged jokers the candy man has to put up these trick candies for them."—New York Times.

Judge Wilcox's Narrow Escape.

Although not generally known and the principal says nothing about it, yet, Judge Wilcox had a very narrow escape from death, or serious injury, during last week, by reason of a Rapid Transit car colliding with his buggy and throwing the Judge and his Japanese driver out. The fault lay with the horse which suddenly became frightened and started across the track in front of a near approaching car. The motor-man was quick in attempting to avert the collision but, the closeness of the two vehicles, permitted the contact. The Judge received quite a shaking up and a strain to his back but, although injured, he found his horse guilty and warned both motormen and conductor of the car to steer clear of his court or they would be apt to get "sentence for life" if they ever appeared there.
